

Acknowledgements	9
Chapter 1: Introduction	11
1.1. Background of the study and research aims	11
1.2. Outline of the book	16
Chapter 2: The Polish Case	19
2.1. Fertility patterns in Poland	20
2.1.1. Fertility	20
2.1.2. Nuptiality and childbearing	23
2.1.3. A note on migration	24
2.1.4. Summary	25
2.2. Context I: The ever-changing economic and institutional landscape	26
2.2.1. From a centrally planned to a free market economy	26
2.2.2. Unemployment	27
2.2.3. Material situation of Poles	29
2.2.4. Importance of human capital: Education	30
2.2.5. Women in the labour market	31
2.2.6. Provision of childcare	33
2.3. Context II: The cultural heritage	34
2.3.1. The Catholic Church	35
2.3.2. Strong family	35
2.3.3. Attitudes towards marriage and gender roles	36
2.3.4. Contraception and abortion	37
2.4. Summary	39
Chapter 3: Theoretical Approaches to Fertility Decline	41
3.1. Theories of low fertility	41
3.1.1. Demographic transitions and post-materialistic values theory	41
3.1.2. Gender Equity Theory	43
3.1.3. Globalisation and uncertainty theory	44
3.1.4. Going micro: combining sub-narratives	45

3.2. Individual behaviour: fertility choices	50
3.2.1. Microeconomic approach	50
3.2.2. Socio-psychological approach: Theory of Planned Behaviour	53
3.2.3. Socio-psychological approach: Traits-Desires-Intentions-Behaviour	56
3.3. Fertility choices in Poland: Individual perspectives	58
3.3.1. The model of individual behaviour: basic assumptions and definitions	60
3.3.2. Research questions	62
Chapter 4: Methodology of the Research: Qualitative Interviews	65
4.1. Rationale for the methodology	65
4.2. Sample selection and characteristics	66
4.3. Method	72
4.3.1. Problem-centred interviews	73
4.4. Qualitative data analysis	78
4.4.1. Open coding	79
4.4.2. Axial coding	80
4.4.3. Selective coding	82
4.5. A note on the presentation of the results	83
Chapter 5: Motivation to Parenthood	85
5.1. Positive attitudes: Expected values of children	85
5.2. Beliefs about parenthood and childlessness	88
5.2.1. Immediate benefits: A natural course of life events	88
5.2.2. Delayed benefits: Fear of getting old	90
5.2.3. Advantages of childlessness and competing goals	92
5.3. Desire to have children, gender difference, and biology	94
5.4. A child or children?	100
5.5. Summary: How is the motivation to have a child formed?	102
Chapter 6: Behavioural Control: Conditions for Parenthood	107
6.1. Actor-related behavioural control	107
6.1.1. Individual development	108
6.1.2. Relationship development: Marriage	109
6.1.3. Actor-related control: Summary	113
6.2. Situation-related behavioural control: Economic and institutional aspects	114
6.2.1. Education	115
6.2.2. The housing situation in Poland	116

6.2.3. Job and income	118
6.2.4. Contradictions in narrations: Is money crucial, and when?	120
6.2.5. Financial resources and the number of children	122
6.2.6. Costs of children: Investing money	123
6.2.7. Costs of children: Investing time	127
6.2.8. Job insecurity	129
6.2.9. (Un)Protected mothers	130
6.2.10. Professional career or earning money?	133
6.2.11. Childcare arrangements	136
6.2.12. Childcare: What about men?	139
6.2.13. Role of the state	141
6.2.14. Situation-related control: A summary	142
6.3. Summary: In what way does behavioural control influence fertility choices?	145
Chapter 7: Understanding a Couple's Choice:
Paths to Parenthood	149
7.1. Behavioural strategies (not) leading to pregnancy	149
7.2. Understanding transitions to parenthood	162
7.3. The process leading to fertility choices – a few general remarks	169
7.4. Summary: Understanding a couple's choice	170
Chapter 8: Concluding Discussion: Old Values, New Context	173
8.1. Summary of the findings	173
8.2. Fertility choices: Anomie or adaptation?	178
References	185
Appendix I Information about the respondents	209
Appendix II Interview guideline	211